Sheffield Knifemakers Since 1838

Taylor's Eye Witness is a long standing family business which has been producing high quality kitchen knives, scissors, cutlery and pocket knives in Sheffield since 1838.

Employing highly skilled Sheffield craftsmen and with a knowledge base which is unrivalled, they have stood the test of time through an unrelenting dedication to quality, service and good old fashioned technical know-how. What they don't know about knives isn't worth knowing!

Taylor's Eye Witness Today

Over 175 years experience has given them the edge when it comes to product development, continually designing and developing kitchenware products based on their customers' needs.

In addition to designing and manufacturing an extensive collection of kitchen knives, scissors, tableware and accessories, Taylor's Eye Witness is proud to represent Kai, SKK, Rösle, Veritable Sabatier and Sabatier Professional in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

Legendary Knifemakers Since 1838

The story starts in 1820 when John Taylor founded a small pocket knife & edge tools workshop in the very heart of Sheffield, the ancestral home of cutlery in Great Britain. As was normal back then, makers would seek the use of a symbol by which their products would be recognised, even by those unable to read. In 1838 Taylor was granted the "Eye Witness" trademark for his goods, accompanied by an illustration of an all-seeing eye, hence the Eye Witness name that exists to this day.

Following the death of Taylor in 1854, the firm was passed to his step daughter Sarah and her husband Thomas Brown Needham, another local cutler. By 1879 the firm was known as Needham, Veall & Tyzack with a sprawling factory on Milton Street, which remained the home of Taylor's Eye Witness until 2018.

The City of Steel

Throughout the 1800s most manufacturing happened within a square mile of Sheffield city centre. Specialised production of various components and product types necessitated having other knife makers nearby to service and be supplied by. Naturally, this led to a series of acquisitions in the late 19th Century as the business sought to rationalise. The firm advanced in size and technologically, becoming widely known as pioneers in the mechanisation of all types of cutlery manufacture under one roof. As an 1897 edition of Sheffield and Rotherham Illustrated puts it:

"The leading features of Messrs Needham, Veall & Tyzack manufactures in these departments are pen and pocketknives in an infinite variety of useful and elegant shapes, table knives, butchers' knives, carvers, scissors, pruning shears, and razors of the finest make in hollow and plain ground, for which latter goods in particular their reputation is speedily becoming world-wide. Some idea of the range of patterns kept in these various goods may be derived from the fact that in pen and pocketknives alone the firm possess over two thousand separate designs, most of which are made in four or five separate coverings."

All this happened just in time for the invention of Martensitic Stainless Steel by Sheffield metallurgist Harry Brearley in 1912. Needham, Veall & Tyzack was an early adopter of Stainless Steel in the production of table cutlery and kitchen knives, which led to further mechanisation of production to meet the demand for this new miracle material.

Modernisation came at a cost though, prompting a huge increase in competition both locally and abroad. Export demand fell as manufacturers on the continent and the United States caught up with developments in Sheffield. An attempt was made by the company to remedy this in the early 1920s, by merging some of Sheffield's largest cutlers to form 'Sheffield Cutlery Manufacturers Ltd'. While the venture did not last, it led to further rationalisation of production and brand acquisitions that ultimately allowed the firm to survive and prosper during and after World War II.

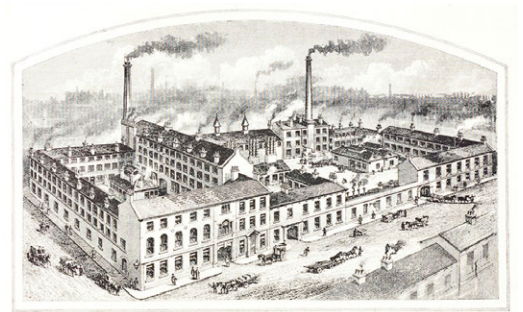

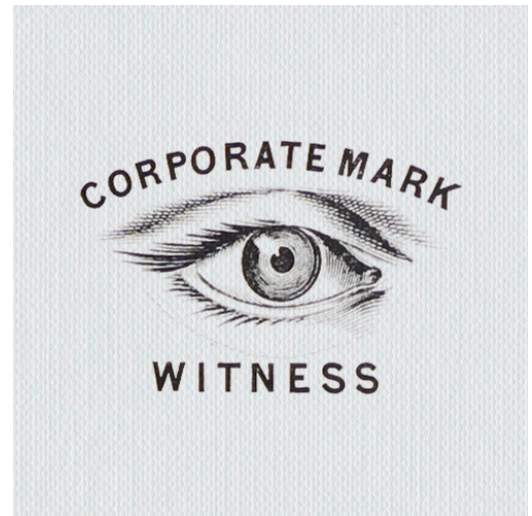

In 1975, Needham, Veall & Tyzack was itself acquired by Harrison Fisher & Co. who ultimately renamed the business Taylor's Eye Witness Ltd. This led to significant investment in new product development during the 1970s & 80s, with renowned industrial designer Robert Welch hired to develop core kitchen knife and scissor designs, some of which are still in production over 40 years later.

Taylor's Eye Witness Today

As one of several remaining knife makers in Sheffield, Taylor's Eye Witness is proud to continue the legacy of the 'Little Mesters' that gave birth to the Sheffield cutlery industry centuries ago.

In 2018, the firm started a new chapter in its history by completing its long-awaited move to larger, newer premises just outside the city centre. This newly equipped facility provided the space required for further growth & production capacity, while enabling significant improvements in efficiency.

Over 180 years' experience has given Taylor's Eye Witness the edge when it comes to product development, continually designing and developing kitchenware products based on their customers' needs. In addition to designing and manufacturing an extensive collection of kitchen knives, scissors, tableware and accessories, Taylor's Eye Witness is proud to represent Kai, SKK, Rösle, Veritable Sabatier and Sabatier Professional in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

SINCE 1888

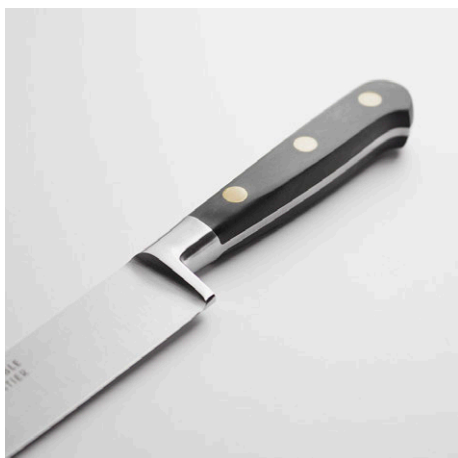

Know Your Knives

What Taylor's doesn't know about knives isn't really worth knowing. Here we share with you what's important when choosing a knife and which knives no kitchen should be without.

Types of Construction

There are essentially six methods of kitchen knife manufacture, each imparting different properties in terms of performance, appearance & cost.

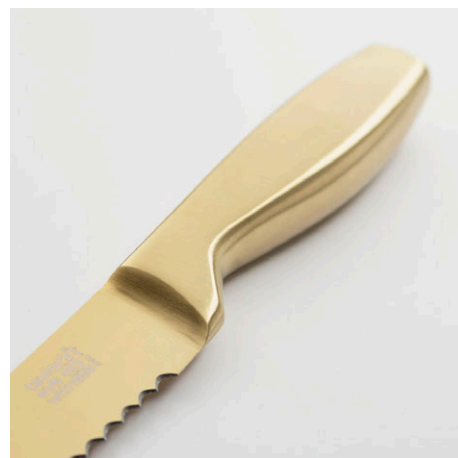

Fully Forged

A genuine fully-forged knife - such as one from our Veritable Sabatier range - is made from a single billet of steel that is formed with drop hammers to define the shape of the blade, bolster and handle. After forging and heat-treating, the handle material is moulded onto the tang, then the blade is polished and sharpened. Offers exceptional performance, strength and balance, favoured by professional chefs.

Full Tang Riveted

A centuries-old design, the classic Full-Tang, Triple Rivet knife is made with a stamped steel blade that is individually heat treated and tempered for excellent edge retention. Left and right 'scales' - made from wood, plastic or micarta - are riveted on to either side of the blade. The whole knife is then polished back for a seamless finish. Lower cost than a fully forged knife, but with similar balance and performance qualities.

All Steel

When making a hollow handle knife, stainless steel pressings are welded to the blade, then the joints are ground and polished back to a smooth finish. Being completely seamless and free of food traps, this type of construction is hygienic and requires very little maintenance. The hollow void inside the handle is often filled with sand or steel weights to fine-tune the knife's balance characteristics.

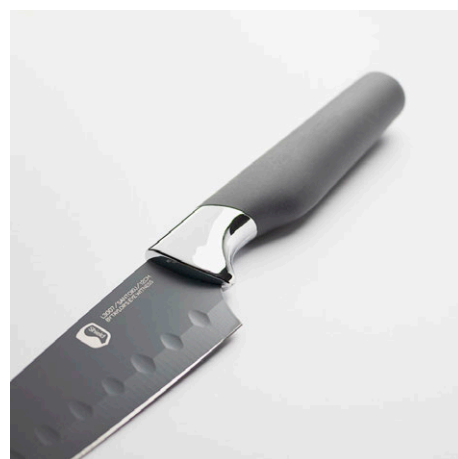

Japanese 'Wa' Handle

The Japanese style 'Wa' handle is characterised by a metal ferrule near the blade which prevents the traditionally wooden handle from splitting. The blade 'tang' extends $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ of the length of the handle providing some weight, though this type of knife typically has a blade-forward balance. Like a broom handle, this traditional design meant that the handle could be easily replaced throughout the life of the blade.

Moulded-On Handle

As the name suggests, the polymer handle is moulded directly over the near-finished blade. This results in a very resilient knife to withstand even the most demanding of environments. This type of knife is favoured particularly by professional chefs, butchers and commercial food producers owing to its easy maintenance, durability, lack of food traps and the ability to colour-code the handle.

Push-On Handle

Many modern knives feature push-on or 'hafted' handles that allow for creative finishes and designs that would not be possible by other methods. In some processes, after insertion of the blade the 'tang' is warmed by inductive heating to melt the polymer handle firmly onto the blade. Push-on knives are generally lower cost, light weight and have the added benefit of consistent quality and performance.

Blade Materials

Stainless steel is a popular class of material for knife blades because it resists corrosion and is easy to maintain. A simple wash and wipe dry is generally all it takes. It is not completely impervious to corrosion or rust, but any stain spots or small rust marks that do occur can be polished out with a good quality stainless steel cleaner and a soft cloth.

There are a number of different grades of Stainless Steel we use to make our knives, each with different properties that we exploit depending on application. The key consideration when selecting the most appropriate steel is the hardness that can be achieved through heat treatment. A blade with very high hardness keeps an edge longer, but is more difficult to sharpen at home and will be considerably more expensive.

Hardness

The 'hardness' of materials is measured on the 'Rockwell' scale. The Rockwell 'C' hardness test involves measuring the depth of indentation made by a diamond penetrator under 150kg of force.

A higher 'HRC' value denotes a harder blade that will keep its edge longer. This number will typically be between 54 and 60 HRC. While higher levels of hardness can be achieved with some specialist alloys, knives of such high hardness will be brittle, prone to damage and next-to-impossible to sharpen at home.

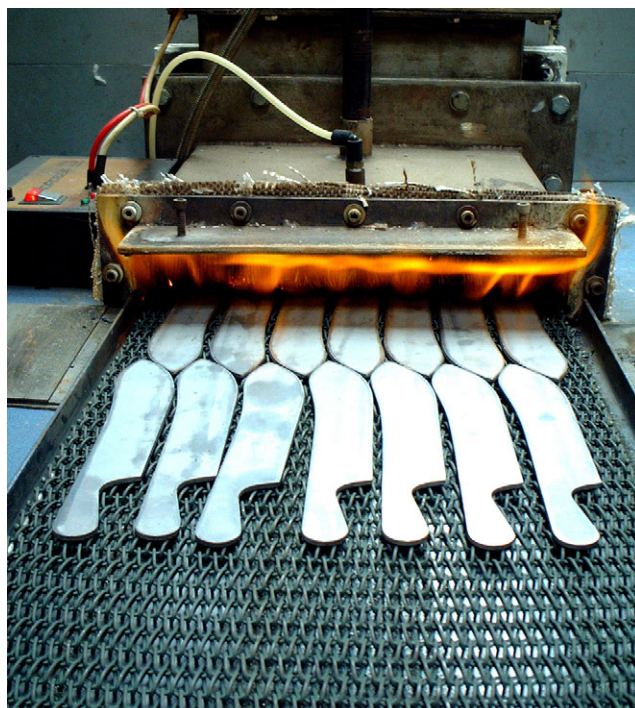

Types of Stainless Steel

Our 'Sheffield Choice' and 'Heritage Series' ranges are made using 420HC steel, which is normally used in the manufacture of razor blades and scalpels. With between 0.4% and 0.5% carbon, it has the highest carbon content in its class, which makes a tough, readily hardenable blade that can be sharpened & maintained easily at home. Our heat treatment process achieves a hardness of up to 56 HRC on the Rockwell hardness scale. Items from the 'Professional Series' and 'Trade Tools' ranges are made in Sheffield with a grade of French stainless steel known as T5Mo - a Molybdenum alloy with 0.45% and 0.55% carbon.

Super-premium knives in our Sheffield Made range are made with Sandvik 14C28N® martensitic blade steel. The addition of nitrogen into the alloy in place of carbon leads to exceptional corrosion resistance. With unrivalled corrosion resistance and a typical hardness of 60 HRC, this super steel is used to make some of the finest kitchen and sports knives in the world.

Further afield, VG-10 stainless steel is a core feature of our Japanese-made kai knives. VG-10 is an exotic alloy with a very high carbon and chromium content for exceptional blade hardness and stain resistance. This steel grade is often used in the manufacture of 'Damascus' steel. Damascus knives feature a blade 'core' made with VG-10. This core is sandwiched between 66 layers of premium blade steel. This process exploits the best properties of each of the steel alloys for the ideal combination of hardness, flexibility & corrosion resistance. When the blade is ground to the classic convex "hamaguriba" taper profile, the minute variations in the thickness of these layers reveal the stunning pattern characteristic of Damascus steel.

Last but by no means least, knives in the Sabatier Professional family are made with molybdenum steel alloy and can be identified by the 'X50CrMoV15' blade etching. This is a high quality all-rounder with very good hardness and stain resistance without breaking the bank.

Heat Treatment

The hardenable varieties of Stainless Steel are generally supplied to the factory in the soft state to allow working of the material into its basic shape either by stamping or forging. Hardening involves heating the blade to between 1020° & 1040°C before cooling it rapidly. The process alters the crystalline structure of the steel making the blade extremely hard. This process is usually followed by tempering - a soak at approximately 200°C - which takes out a little of the hardness to de-stress the steel, making it less brittle and slightly flexible.

Edge Types

There are several common types of blade grinding techniques, all intended to thin the blade edge without compromising strength. Most blades are then given a plain edge - which requires periodic sharpening at home - or are given serrations for specific cutting tasks.

Taper Grind

A symmetrical wedge shaped profile is ground through the breadth of the blade. Results in a very fine edge that will retain its sharpness well, without sacrificing the overall strength of the blade. Requires considerable skill to produce.

Asymmetrical Hollow Grind

Typical of many traditional Japanese knives, the main body of the blade is flat, while a chisel grind is taken from the right-hand side of the blade. The opposite side of the blade - while appearing flat - has a slight concave grind.

Symmetrical Hollow Grind

A concave grind is taken from a portion of the blade to thin the edge before sharpening. This process results in a very durable edge and permits the use of thinner steels for improved cutting performance & flexibility.

Blade 'Kullens'

Typical of Japanese style santoku knives, these concave air pockets are ground into both sides of the blade with the aim of reducing sticking & drag while slicing & chopping.

Fine Serrated Edge

Peaks and troughs are ground to one side of the knife. The peaks provide the initial cut, while protecting the troughs from damage. Ideal for tender foods, stringy vegetables, dried foods and sinewy meats.

Scalloped Edge

Broad, saw-like scallops ground on a single side of the blade. Designed to zip through crusty bread, reducing the amount of pressure required thus reducing the chance of crushing the soft centre.

Know Your Knives

Blade Types

Selecting the best tool for the job will make all your food preparation jobs quicker, easier and safer.

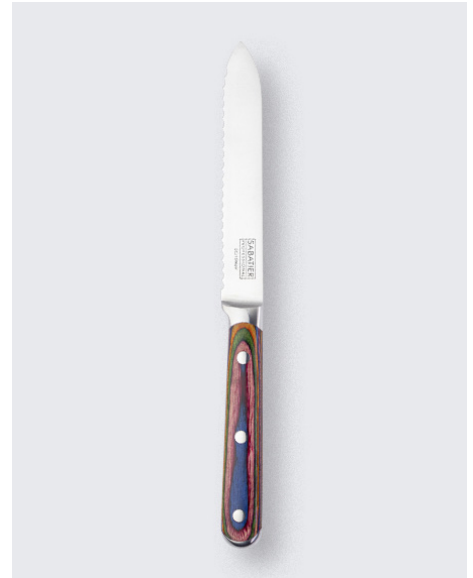

Paring Knife

A short, agile blade with a sharp point for removing blemishes. Designed specifically for precision tasks such as peeling, top and tailing & de-seeding vegetables.

All Purpose Knife

A versatile knife for cutting, slicing & trimming meat, vegetables & even sandwiches. Its small size is ideal for precision tasks and decoration.

Serrated Utility Knife

A good serrated knife will glide through a tomato without crushing the delicate flesh. Makes light work of tough, stringy vegetables and cured sausage.

Santoku Knife

Loosely translates from Japanese as 'three virtues', in reference to the three cutting jobs it is intended for: slicing, dicing and mincing. Scallops on the surface of the blade help reduce sticking of food.

Chef's or Cook's Knife

A chef's knife's deep heel protects the knuckles for chopping, rocking & dicing. Available in various sizes between 14 and 25cm, a curved blade facilitates a rocking motion while chopping herbs or nuts.

Bread Knife

Broad, saw-like scallops zip through crusty bread, reducing the amount of pressure required thus reducing the chance of crushing the soft centre. Also ideal for carving roast pork & beef. Usually 20 or 23cm long.

Carving Knife

Usually between 20 & 25cm long, a carving knife is used to slice thin cuts of poultry, roasts, hams & other cooked meats. A carving knife is generally thinner than a chef's knife enabling it to carve with more precision.

Filleting Knife

A thin, flexible blade designed to move easily along the backbone and under the skin of fish. The blade is specially heat treated and tempered to give it its characteristic spring.

Boning Knife

Used to remove bones from cuts of meat and is particularly useful when de-boning poultry. Similar to a filleting knife in size and shape, but with a narrower, stiffer blade to negotiate small spaces.

Steak Knife

Unlike other 'table' knives, a steak knife is made to same standard as a kitchen knife to retain a sharp edge. Serrations assist with cutting & help protect the sharpened edge from damage by ceramic plates.

Cook's Carving Fork

A cook's fork features two sharp tines to hold roasts steady while carving, keeping your hands safely away from the knife. Also lends a hand whilst moving food during cooking, serving slices & shredding pulled pork.

Cleaver

Used for splitting or 'cleaving' meat & bone. They have a thicker, stronger & less acutely ground edge than a kitchen knife. A Chinese Chef's Knife is similar in size & shape, but with a finer edge intended for fine chopping.

Nakiri Knife

The Nakiri blade shape is a traditional Japanese vegetable knife, ideal for chopping and dicing. The thin, straight-edged blade cuts all the way through to the chopping board without the need for a pull stroke.

Ham & Salmon Slicer

A very long, flexible blade with a rounded tip. They are especially useful for slicing roast meats & cured fish, as their generous length allows you to slice with a single draw of the blade for a smoother presentation.

Premier Collection

Taylor's Eye Witness is synonymous with the finest quality Sheffield cutlery ever since John Taylor founded the legend in 1838. John's keen eye for the best raw materials and uncompromising standards of craftsmanship have been passed down through the generations.

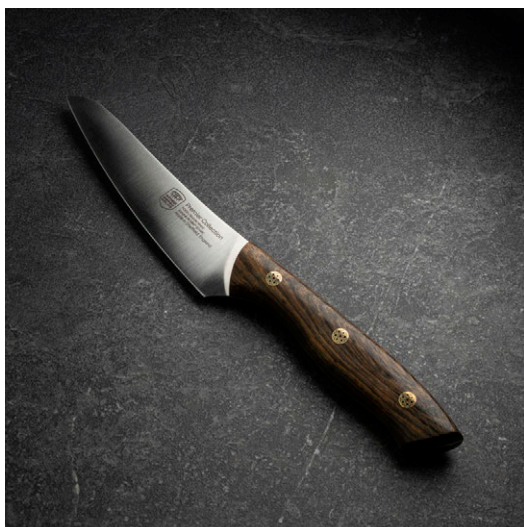

Today, Taylor's Eye Witness keeps craftsmanship very much alive with the Premier Collection range of kitchen knives. Released in strictly limited quantities, these exquisite kitchen knives are crafted by hand in our Sheffield Factory. Probably the finest to ever leave Sheffield.

Premier Collection

Sheffield Made

This is not your average knife

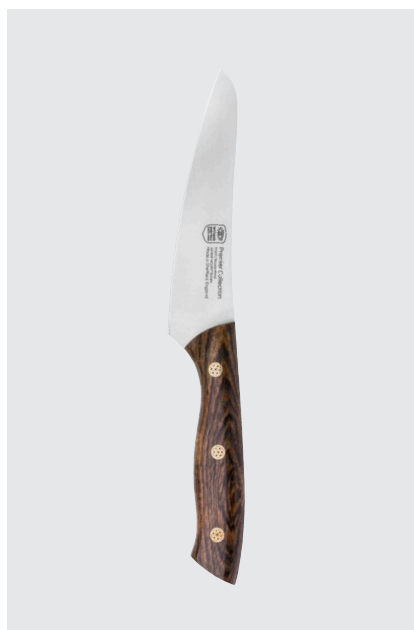

For this edition of the Premier Collection range, we have chosen Mexican Bocote wood timber to form the handles, paired with high specification Sandvik 14C28N® martensitic blade steel, secured with stunning copper & brass mosaic rivets.

The boldly - figured grain of the Mexican Bocote tree lends itself perfectly to the striking blade shapes we have carefully designed. To enhance the hand feel & to improve durability & water resistance, the wood has been “stabilised” by replacing almost all the moisture in the raw timber with resin under a high vacuum. You will notice that each pair of handle scales has been kept together during all stages of production for a perfectly book-matched contiguous grain.

Breaking with tradition, the Swedish chromium stainless steel we have selected for this knife promises unrivalled corrosion resistance & thanks to our expertise in hardening, excellent edge retention. Each raw blade blank is individually heat treated & cryogenically soaked to achieve a typical hardness of Rockwell C 60.

It's at this stage that the blade is symmetrically taper ground. Precision and consistency is achieved thanks to our suite of computer aided grinding machines. The final cutting edge is ground & polished by hand ensuring unparalleled sharpness from heel to tip.

Reassuringly, production of this edition of the Premier Collection range is strictly limited to 2,000 units & thus each piece has been individually numbered.

Sheffield Choice

Ultra-fine razor-blade steel with a tactile, fibre-feel handle, the Sheffield Choice knife has been a customer favourite for decades.

We are so confident that these are the sharpest knives your customers will ever use, that we will refund their purchase price if they do not agree!

Made in Sheffield, England by skilled craftsmen to quality standards established over generations, these knives have blades which are hollow ground from razor blade steel for optimum performance. The tactile, fibre-feel handle is directly moulded onto the blade and has a ribbed area for a safe, secure grip.

Heritage Oak

Heritage Oak knives are equally at home in the modern or traditional kitchen. The full tang blades, made from a single piece of high carbon stainless steel, are precision ground to provide exceptional strength, flexibility and lasting sharpness.

Each and every blade is individually heat treated and tempered to achieve the hardness required to hold a finely ground edge. Our state-of-the-art, digitally controlled grinding machines then prepare each blade blank to final geometry before being sharpened and honed entirely by hand for exceptional performance and edge retention.

The European oak handles are shaped to fit perfectly in the hand, the endstop preventing the knife from accidentally slipping. Each handle scale is secured with three solid brass rivets and finished by hand in the same tradition as they have been for generations. New packaging rolling out across the range, made with 100% recycled plastic.

Pocket Knives

Eye Witness pocket knives have been a treasured possession throughout the world for over 160 years and are still made entirely by hand in our Sheffield factory.

The Premier Collection is constantly changing with only a limited quantity being made in any one design. Reassuringly, each piece is made by one craftsman from start to finish.

You get an unmistakable feel for Taylor's 180 years of history when you first hold a Premier Collection pocket knife. It will stay with you through the many years of loyal service it has been made to give.

Finished to exacting standards and made using carefully selected materials, each knife truly is a one-of-a-kind work of art.

PC1376 Stockman's Knife

The Stockman became a popular export in the late 18th Century thanks to their use by British settlers in the Colonies and later by ranchers in the United States. A double-ended pocket knife featuring a clip-point, lambfoot & spey blade. Shown in Desert Ironwood with file-worked backsprings.

Blades: 6.8cm / 2¾" clip point; 5cm / 2" Lambfoot; 4.5cm \ 1¾" Spey.

New for 2024

Taylor's Eye Witness is proud to introduce a stunning multi-blade to the highly sought-after Premier Collection series of pocket knives.

Developed by long-standing colleague and renowned craftsman Keith Moorby, this design is heavily influenced by a pattern originally made by us in the 1920s.

No expense has been spared in the building of this five-bladed masterpiece: You will find every blade is perfectly centred and tensioned, while each of the three backsprings feature elegant hand-crafted file work emblematic of the Premier Collection series.

Each knife includes an escutcheon plate ideal for monogram engraving. Scales will be selected from a variety of native and exotic hardwoods and horns, a selection of which are previewed here.

Pocket Knives

Endurance

Endurance pocket knives have been developed to be the toughest pocket knives we've ever produced and believe us when we say we've made a few! With rugged, triple bolt-locked "fibre feel" handles and a sharpness and blade hardness you'd expect from an Eye Witness pocket knife, they'll never let you down.

Like all our pocket knives, they have been made entirely by hand in our Sheffield factory and come with a lifetime warranty.

Knife Care & Storage

Looking After Knives

All our knives are designed to provide years of reliable service. This advice will keep them looking and working at their best.

While most of our knives are perfectly fine for dishwasher use, for best results and to keep your knives looking like new for longer, all knives are better washed by hand. With a plastic dish brush and hot, soapy water, gently remove any food residue from the blade. Don't be tempted to use scouring pads, wire wool or scouring powder. These can create microscopic scratches that may become a source for corrosion and make them harder to clean next time.

Dry by hand right away with a soft towel and return your knife to the knife block.

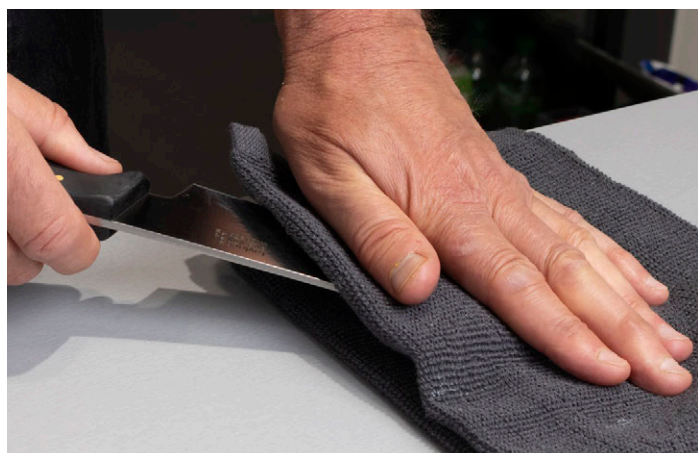

If you still prefer to use a dishwasher, place knives in the top rack with the cutting edge pointing down. Don't place knives in contact with other metal items in the dishwasher and make sure not to put sterling silver cutlery in the same cycle as stainless steel kitchen knives. The washing solution can act as an electrolyte and lead to galvanic corrosion between the two dissimilar metals.

Avoid "rinse & hold" programmes and dry your knives by hand as soon as the washing cycle is complete.

Should any stain spots appear after washing, these can be easily removed with a soft cloth and stainless steel polish.

To keep your knives in best condition, always use a wooden or plastic chopping board to prevent damage to the finely ground edge. Remember that even the hardest steel is no match for ceramic plates, stone countertops or glass worktop protectors.

Never store open blades in the cutlery drawer. Apart from the obvious risk of injury when rummaging for that last teaspoon, the knife edge is prone to damage from other items in the drawer. Consider a universal knife block or magnetic knife rack so that your knives are safely stored and always at hand.

Using a Whetstone

The finest knives are best sharpened with a ceramic bonded whetstone. With care, preparation, and a good quality whetstone from KAI or Sabatier Professional, you can quickly master this immensely satisfying task at home.

While there are several different techniques for sharpening with a whetstone, we find the following method provides the most consistent results and is very easy to master. If you are new to whetstone grinding, we suggest getting a feel for the process with a low cost knife. A larger blade with an exposed heel is easier to begin your training with. With a little practice you will soon be sharpening kitchen knives for your friends and family!

Before use, the whetstone should be completely soaked in water for at least 10 minutes. The longer the better. Ensure that a light film of water is always visible on the surface during grinding. This acts to lubricate the surface, cool the blade edge and carry away swarf. You will find it useful to have a jug of water or a spray bottle available to keep the surface wet during sharpening. Choosing a stone with a water reservoir helps keep your work area clean and tidy. Alternatively, a damp teatowel placed under the whetstone comes in handy to keep the stone still and soak up any spills.

Double-Edged Blades

If you have selected a combination whetstone, start with the coarser side to prepare the edge for fine sharpening. Beginning with the heel of the blade positioned in the top right corner of the stone, keep the knife approximately 20 degrees off the surface of the stone. Placing your left hand over the deepest part of the blade will help you maintain a consistent grinding angle. Sweep the knife back and forth over the full length of the stone using a light pressure, grinding the full length of the blade. At the end of each pull stroke, the tip of the blade should be in the bottom right corner of the stone. Repeat several times moving backwards and forwards over the stone. You should start to feel a fine burr along the opposite edge of the blade.

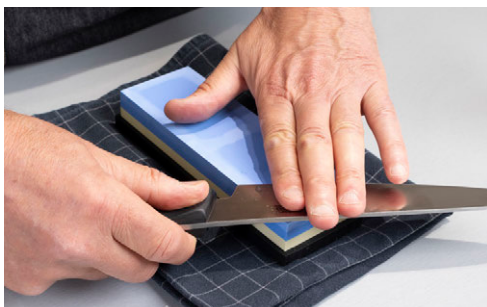

Turn the knife over and repeat the process on the other side of the blade. Try to use the same number of strokes on each side so you end up with a symmetrically sharpened blade.

Repeat the process with the finest side of the whetstone to achieve a durable polished edge. It's always a good idea at this point to give the stone a little more water.

Rinse the knife carefully in clean hot water after sharpening, and dry by hand using a soft towel.

Single-Edged Blades

Sharpening asymmetrical Japanese blades is a little different. Start by grinding the bevelled side of the blade using the above method, until you start to feel a burr on the opposite side of the blade. To remove the burr, turn the knife over and lay the hollow ground side of the blade completely flat onto the surface of the stone. Use the finest grit stone you have available. With a very light pressure, work the blade back and forth, grinding in overlapping sections perpendicular to the blade edge.

Using a Sharpening Steel

Put simply, a honing steel is a rod of material that is considerably harder than the blade it is designed to sharpen. Often they are made with very high carbon steel which can be heat treated to obtain the hardness required, or steels embedded with a synthetic diamond compound are becoming increasingly popular.

A good quality honing steel acts to realign microscopic kinks, curls and folds that appear on a blade edge during normal use.

They aren't designed to remove material from the blade, but act to restructure the grind profile for better cutting performance and longer lasting sharpness.

The trick to using a steel is maintaining the edge angle during use. This is best achieved by placing the steel vertically onto a cutting board... you will notice the steel has a slightly pointed tip precisely for this purpose. This will allow you to concentrate fully on a smooth, steady movement with your knife hand. Definitely don't wave the steel around in mid-air like on the telly, this won't do your knives any favours!

Start with the heel of your knife near the handle end of the steel and sweep down and back, so that the tip of the blade leaves the metal towards the end of the steel. Try to maintain an angle of around 20° between the blade and the steel. Do the same on the opposite side of the blade and repeat the entire cycle 5 to 10 times.

Do this little and often to keep your knives in top condition. Rinse the knife carefully in clean hot water after sharpening, and dry by hand using a soft clean towel. A carbon steel should not be washed – just give it a wipe with a towel and return to the cutlery drawer or knife block.

Countertop Sharpeners

For simple, safe maintenance of your kitchen knives, take a look at our wide range of countertop sharpeners which are designed to take the hassle out of knife maintenance.

The Original Chantry® Knife Sharpener reproduces the action of a butcher's steel. The carbon steel rods inside the sharpener revolve under tension, realigning bumps and kinks in the blade edge that occur during day-to-day use.

The mechanism automatically adjusts to ensure the correct edge angle is applied, sharpening both sides of the blade equally. Works great with bread knives too!

If the edge of your knife has become chipped or damaged, it's time to resharpen your knife. Consider investing in a multi-stage sharpener like the SureSharp Adjustable Knife & Scissor Sharpener. This neat design is fully adjustable to suit all manner of knife types, from acutely-ground filleting knives right the way up to cleavers & sports knives.

The 2-stage mechanism re-edges blunt knives & hones your knives to keep them sharp. Simply turn the knob to dial in the desired grinding angle from 14° to 24°. If the existing edge angle is unknown, refer to the suggested grinding angles printed on the back of the sharpener.

Also includes a very useful scissor sharpening slot. Simply insert the scissors through the slot as far as they'll go, as if you are trying to snip the ceramic rod. Pull the scissors through while at the same time closing them around the rod, keeping the sides of the blades flat against the vertical plastic guides. Repeat as necessary. Left-handed scissors can be sharpened from the rear of the sharpener.

Universal Knife Blocks

You don't become the knife experts without knowing a thing or two about knife blocks!

We offer a range of knife storage options for every budget. Safe, flexible and universal storage for your knives and scissors, be they your prized knife sets or just random knife collections.

Precision 1200 Electric Knife Sharpener

Sharpening your own kitchen knives is easier than you'd think and needn't cost you a fortune.

The SureSharp Precision 1200 Electric Knife Sharpener is designed to restore a factory-fresh edge to all sorts of kitchen knives including ceramic blades & asymmetric Japanese blades.

Two diamond abrasive wheel sets progressively recreate a fine cutting edge, while a ceramic-based stropping wheel polishes the blade edge for longer lasting sharpness.

TH1200B

SureSharp Precision 1200 Electric Knife Sharpener

*For all types of kitchen knives including ceramic knives & asymmetric Japanese blades.
Comprehensive instruction booklet included.
British Standard plug fitted.*

Scissors & Shears

Heritage Series

Housecraft Scissors

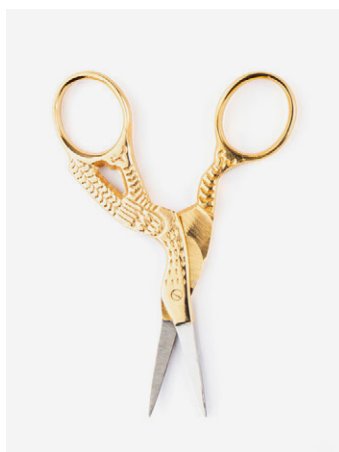

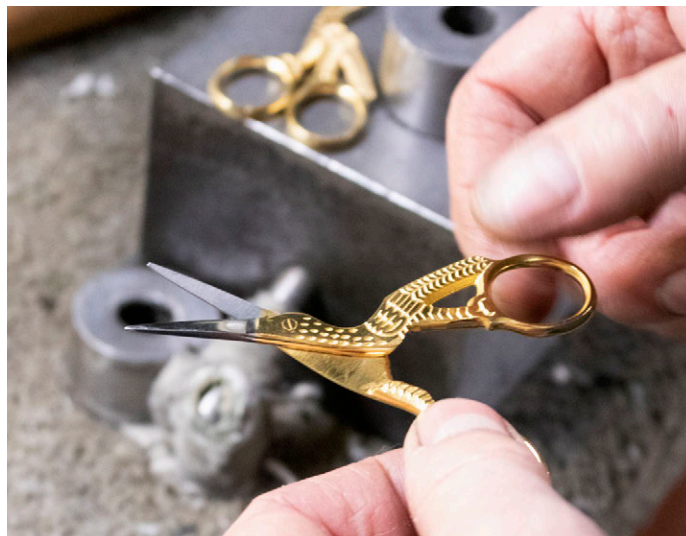

Quality from pinch to point

Heritage Series scissors & shears are retro classics evoking childhood memories of grandma's sewing tin.

Hot forged from a single billet of high quality stainless steel, Heritage Series scissors & shears are precision ground and finished entirely by hand.

Each individual scissor is hand tested in our Sheffield Factory to ensure the perfect cut from pinch to point before packing and dispatch to store.

Sheffield Made

Housecraft Scissors

Scissors are far from easy to make, but our expertise puts us among the top few manufacturers in the world.

After directly moulding the handles onto the precision ground stainless steel blades, every single scissor is tensioned & fine tuned entirely by hand, then tested twice before leaving the factory.

We offer a comprehensive range of kitchen, household & specialist needlecraft scissors made right here in our Sheffield factory.

Genuine left handed versions of many of our patterns are also available.

Kitchen Tools & Accessories

With uncompromising quality pitched at affordable everyday prices, the range is constantly being updated with new additions and colours, so watch this space! Unlike some silicone tools on the market, all Taylor's Eye Witness silicone utensils are made ONLY with LFGB grade food safe silicone.

LFGB (Lebensmittel-, Bedarfsgegenstände-und Futtermittelgesetzbuch, or the "Foods, Consumer Goods and Foodstuffs Code") refers to rigorous & strict product testing standards required for food contact materials in parts of the European Union. Products manufactured with LFGB grade silicone are made with natural raw materials of the highest purity and thus have no discernible odour and are certified as free from BPA, Lead, Phthalates, Mercury, PVC and Latex.
